Public Administration Education and Training

2023 - 2024

United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs

The Department of Economic and Social Affairs of the United Nations Secretariat is a vital interface between global policies in the economic, social, and environmental spheres and national action. The Department works in three main interlinked areas: (i) it compiles, generates, and analyses a wide range of economic, social, and environmental data and information on which Member States of the United Nations draw to review common problems and to take stock of policy options; (ii) it facilitates the negotiations of Member States in many intergovernmental bodies on joint course of action to address ongoing or emerging global challenges; and (iii) it advises interested Governments on the ways and means of translating policy frameworks developed in United Nations conferences and summits into programs at the country level and, through technical assistance, helps build national capacities. DPIDG is a division of the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UN DESA). It provides secretariat support to the United Nations Programme in Public Administration. DPIDG's mission is to assist the Member States of the United Nations in advancing the implementation of the 2030 Agenda and the Sustainable Development Goals, including through fostering effective, efficient, transparent, accountable, inclusive, and innovative public governance, administration, and services for sustainable development. The United Nations Project Office on Governance (UNPOG) is part of UN DESA/DPIDG. Its principal mission is to strengthen the public governance capacities of developing Member States in Asia, the Pacific, and beyond to achieve the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA)

IASIA is an entity of the International Institute of Administrative Sciences (IIAS) but has its own governance: its own Network (Members who are Schools, Institutes and Universities of Administration, its General Assembly, and Board of Management (BoM)). It shares with IIAS the Secretariat. The IASIA is influencing the global governance agenda through high impact events targeting and involving both public service and academia; production and dissemination of relevant knowledge on public administration, public governance and public service; enabling collaborative and strategic projects with members and partners; and accrediting both academic and professional training programs in line with standards of best practices in public management. At its 2012 annual conference, IASIA decided to initiate a world-wide program of accrediting public administration education and training programs, and established in 2013 a stand alone body for accreditation and quality assurance, namely the International Commission on the Accreditation of Public Administration and Training Programs (ICAPA) who benefited from the support of UN-DESA to design and disseminate the Standards of excellence in the framework of a joint UN-DESA/IASIA Task Force established in 2005 while the Standards were issued in 2008¹.

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

1 NO POVERTY
End poverty in all its forms everywhere

10 REDUCED INEQUALITIES
Reduce inequality within and among countries

2 ZERO HUNGER
End hunger, achieve food security and improved nutrition and promote sustainable agriculture

11 SUSTAINABLE CITIES AND COMMUNITIES
Make cities and human settlements inclusive, safe, resilient and sustainable

3 GOOD HEALTH AND WELL-BEING
Ensure healthy lives and promote well-being for all at all ages

12 RESPONSIBLE CONSUMPTION AND PRODUCTION
Ensure sustainable consumption and production patterns

4 QUALITY EDUCATION
Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all

13 CLIMATE ACTION
Take urgent action to combat climate change and its impacts

5 GENDER EQUALITY
Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls

14 LIFE BELOW WATER
Conserve and sustainably use the oceans, seas and marine resources for sustainable development

6 CLEAN WATER AND SANITATION
Ensure availability and sustainable management of water and sanitation for all

15 LIFE ON LAND
Protect, restore and promote sustainable use of terrestrial ecosystems, sustainably manage forests, combat desertification, and halt and reverse land degradation and halt biodiversity loss

7 AFFORDABLE AND CLEAN ENERGY
Ensure access to affordable, reliable, sustainable and modern energy for all

16 PEACE, JUSTICE AND STRONG INSTITUTIONS
Promote peaceful and inclusive societies for sustainable development, provide access to justice for all and build effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels

8 DECENT WORK AND ECONOMIC GROWTH
Promote sustained, inclusive and sustainable economic growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all

17 PARTNERSHIPS FOR THE GOALS
Strengthen the means of implementation and revitalize the Global Partnership for Sustainable Development

9 INDUSTRY, INNOVATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE
Build resilient infrastructure, promote inclusive and sustainable industrialization and foster innovation

Acknowledgements

This Informational Booklet on the UN DESA/IASIA 2023 Task Force on Excellence in Public Administration Education and Training was prepared under the responsibility of Mr. Juwang Zhu, Director, Division for Public Institutions and Digital Government (DPIDG), United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UN DESA) and Dr. Najat Zarrouk, President of the International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA). Dr. Allan Rosenbaum, Chairperson of the Task Force Group and Chairperson of the International Commission on the Accreditation of Public Administration and Training Programs (ICAPA), and Dr. Joao Salis Gomes, Chairperson of ICAPA Steering Committee provided invaluable advice and support throughout the planning process of the Task Force's activities.

The UN DESA team was led by Adriana Alberti, Chief, Programme Management and Capacity Development Unit, DPIDG, UN DESA, who provided advice and coordinated the preparation of the Booklet together with Cristina Rodriguez-Acosta, Inter-regional Adviser, with the support of Gregory McGann, DPIDG. Mr. Cesar Alfonzo, Executive Secretary of IASIA, provided invaluable support to the organization of the Task Force's activities. UN DESA's team is also comprised of Hyeyoung Kim, Head of DPIDG's United Nations Project Office on Governance (UNPOG), and Prabin Maharjan.

The team wishes to thank all Task Force members for their engagement and insightful contributions to the review and upgrade of the Standards of Excellence in Public Administration Education and Training.

Executive Summary

This Informational Booklet provides an overview of the work being undertaken by the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs (UN DESA) and the International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA) 2023 Task Force on Excellence in Public Administration Education and Training. The Task Force was established to review and upgrade the Standards of Excellence for Public Administration Education and Training, which were elaborated in 2008. The Standards are being reviewed to mainstream the Sustainable Development Goals and reflect new developments in public administration. The review represents an opportunity to profoundly affect the world for good by improving the quality of its governance.

The Booklet offers background information about the 2008 Standards of Excellence for Public Administration Education and Training and how they were developed. It also highlights why the Standards of Excellence are being reviewed. It provides information on the composition of the 2023 UN DESA/IASIA Task Force and the members' role in the review process. The Booklet also offers information about the Roadmap and Timeline for the review and upgrade of the Standards of Excellence. During the first meeting of the 2023 UN DESA/IASIA Task Force it was agreed that the review process will take place between 2023 and 2024. It will be conducted through a global and regional consultative process, including through an online open call. All schools and institutes of public administration, networks, academia, and representatives of international and regional organizations, as well as all actors and stakeholders, are invited to contribute to the review process. The new Standards are expected to be published in the Fall of 2024 and will be available on the UNPAN website.

To learn more about this initiative and to contribute to the online open call (July-August 2023), visit the United Nations Network on Public Administration (UNPAN) website.

Background

1. Background

1.1. Overview of the 2008 Standards of Excellence for Public Administration Education and Training

The development of the Standards of Excellence for Public administration Education and Training was the result of a joint initiative between the Division of Public Administration and Development Management (DPADM) (currently Division for Public Institutions and Digital Government), Department of Economic and Social Affairs (DESA) of the United Nations (UN) and the International Association of Schools and Institutes of Administration (IASIA). A joint UN DESA/IASIA Task Force was set up in 2005 and the Standards were issued in 2008.

1.2. What was the purpose for establishing the Standards of Excellence in 2008?

The UN DESA/IASIA initiative was premised on the belief that public administration education and training programs must be conceived and implemented to make current and future public sector leaders capable of effectively addressing the key issues facing the world today. “The Task Force was established as the UN had received inquiries from public administration education and training programs in many parts of the world about whether it might initiate a process for accrediting such programs as a means of enhancing excellence. Second, it had received several inquiries from governments around the world regarding the issue of enhancing senior governmental leadership and it felt that, for upper-level officials, the broader perspective of a worldwide academic organization could be of special value”.

The purpose of the joint initiative was to provide a set of standards that could be used by schools of public administration and institutes of public management to assess the quality of public administration and training as well as provide aspirational goals for such programs.

A set of criteria and guidelines were also developed on how to evaluate the implementation of the Standards. To this end, IASIA established the International Commission on Accreditation of Public Administration Education and Training \(ICAPA\). ICAPA provides full international accreditation based on the conformance of the Institute and/or the program with the United Nations/IASIA Standards of Excellence for Public Administration Education and Training Programs.

1.3. What are the 2008 Standards of Excellence?

The Task Force believed that standards of excellence for public administration education and training should facilitate organizations in the public sector to be high performing through providing them with the highest quality of public servants. The UN DESA/IASIA Task Force elaborated the following 8 Standards:

- (1) Public service commitment;
- (2) Advocacy of public interest values;
- (3) Combining scholarship, practice and community service;
- (4) The faculty are central;
- (5) Inclusiveness is at the heart of the program;
- (6) A Curriculum that is purposeful and responsive;
- (7) Adequate Resources are critical;
- (8) Balancing collaboration and competition.

For each Standard, the Task Force provided a description as follows:

1. Public Service Commitment:

The faculty and administration of the program are defined by their fundamental commitment to public service. They are in all of their activities (teaching, training, research, technical assistance and other service activities) at all times absolutely committed to the advancement of the public interest and the building of democratic institutions. This is true within all facets of the program including internal organizational arrangements as well as programmatic activities at local, regional, national and international levels.

2. Advocacy of Public Interest Values:

The program's faculty and administration reflect their commitment to the advancement of public service by both their advocacy for, and their efforts to create, a culture of participation, commitment, responsiveness and accountability in all of those organizations and institutions with which they come into contact. In so doing, both by pedagogy and example, they prepare students and trainees to provide the highest quality of public service.

3. Combining Scholarship, Practice and Community Service:

Because public administration is an applied science, the faculty and administration of the program are committed to the integration of theory and practice and as such the program draws upon knowledge and understanding generated both by the highest quality of research and the most outstanding practical experience. Consequently, the faculty, administration and students of the program are actively engaged through its teaching, training, research and service activities with all of their stakeholder communities from the smallest village or city neighborhood to the global community at large.

4. The Faculty are Central:

The commitment and quality of the faculty (and/or trainers) is central to the achievement of program goals in all areas of activities. Consequently, there must be, especially in degree granting programs, a full time core faculty committed to the highest standards of teaching, training and research and possessing the authority and responsibility appropriate to accepted standards of faculty program governance. This faculty must be paid at a level that allows them to devote the totality of their professional activities to the achievements of the goals and purposes of the program and must be available in adequate numbers consistent with the mission of the program. In that regard, a ratio of 1 faculty member per 20 graduate level students and at least 4 full time faculty would represent typical minimum requirements. Faculty teaching responsibilities should not be greater than two academic courses (or their equivalent in a training institution) at any time in the calendar year in order to allow for necessary involvement in research, training, service and technical assistance activities.

5. Inclusiveness is at the Heart of the Program:

A critical element in the achievement of excellence in public administration education and training is an unwavering commitment on the part of faculty and administration to diversity of ideas and of participation. The people who participate in programs, including students, trainees, trainers, administrators and faculty, should come from all the different racial, ethnic, and demographic communities of the society. The ideas, concepts, theories and practices addressed in the program should represent a broad variety of intellectual interests and approaches. Inclusiveness in terms of individual involvement (including sensitivity to issues of ethnicity, nationality, race, gender orientation and accessibility to all) within a program serves also to encourage inclusiveness in terms of ideas. Both forms of inclusiveness, intellectual and participatory, are the hallmarks of excellent programs.

6. A Curriculum that is Purposeful and Responsive:

A principal goal of public administration education and training is the development of public administrators who will make strong, positive contributions to the public service generally and, in particular, to the organizations they join, or to which they return. This requires public administration education and training programs to have coherent missions which drive program organization and curriculum development. In addition, it is critical that those who educate and train public administrators communicate and work with and, as appropriate, be responsive to the organizations for which they are preparing students and trainees. It also requires that the student and/or trainee be inculcated with a commitment to making a difference and that their education and training prepare them to effectively communicate (both verbally and in writing) with those with whom they work.

7. Adequate Resources are Critical:

An important prerequisite to creating a program of excellence in public administration education and training is the availability of adequate resources. Many different kinds of resources are required including facilities, technology, library resources and student services (in terms of assistance with meeting such basic needs as housing, health care, etc.). The availability of these resources is obviously a function of the availability of adequate financial resources. Those financial resources must be such as to sustain full time faculty and/or trainers, provide needed assistance to students and faculty (such as funding to participate in international conferences, etc) and insure the availability of adequate classroom, research, training and meeting space as well as individual offices for each faculty member and as needed for students.

8. Balancing Collaboration and Competition:

Finally, and most importantly, there must be among the program faculty, trainers, administrators and students or trainees a sense of common purpose and mission deriving from the program's commitment to the advancing of the public interest. There must also be a sense of determination, indeed even competitiveness, that drives the program to be the best and creates a desire to meet and exceed world class standards of excellence.

In order to assess the achievement of these standards of excellence it was necessary to have appropriate criteria against which to measure program progress. The criteria for assessing standards presented below were discussed within the Task Force and with other colleagues at the several open meetings organized by the Task Force during international conferences.

Main Categories of Criteria for Measuring Standards of Excellence

The criteria for measuring the Standards are divided into various categories. This categorization can be debated, and certainly other groupings are possible and defensible. However, after the inspection of several sets of criteria and/or standards used in international evaluation and accreditation, it was concluded that one could divide criteria for measuring standards into two groups: the first being those concerned with the organizational nature and characteristics of the institution providing programs and the second being those criteria that relate to the actual program being delivered by the institution. Therefore, we distinguish:

- A. Institutional criterion
- B. Program-related criterion which can be subdivided into four subcategories:
 - B1 Program development and review;
 - B2 Program content;

- B3 Program management;
- B4 Program performance.

For a full description of the criteria, see http://www.atlas101.ca/pm/wp-content/uploads/2015/12/UN-IASIA_Standards.pdf

1.4. Who was part of the UN DESA/IASIA 2008 Task Force?

The joint UN DESA/IASIA Task Force was composed of 14 members Task Force Members, which included experts and practitioners from schools and associations of public administration, and representatives of international and regional organizations from across the world. The members were selected by the former Director of DPIDG and the IASIA President. Due consideration was given to geographical and gender balance².

² List of the 14 members in the Annex VII.

Rationale

2. Rationale

2.1. Why should the Standards of Excellence be reviewed and updated?

The Standards of Excellence were finalized in 2008 almost 15 years ago. While the Standards are still relevant today, they do not refer to recent inter-governmental agreements and to the insights from the work undertaken by UN DESA/DPIDG and IASIA in the area of education and training.

It is important to keep in mind that the standards of excellence created by UN DESA/IASIA have a broader purpose than just accreditation. For example, the government of Finland's aid agency used them to improve the quality of public administration, education, and training in different parts of the world. For many countries, such as Namibia, and many universities and institutes, such as the University of Pretoria, the standards of excellence have been used for the development of their own programs and upgrading their quality, even though they have not gone through the accreditation. Moreover, in countries like India and China, the standards have been used for self-assessment and development purposes, even though the programs in those countries could not meet all of the standards.

The Task force activities also included several events at conferences worldwide, such as listening sessions, with close to 1,500 people participating in the process. The capacity development process necessitated viewing institutions responsible for training public servants and other public services in general as a vital instrument for promoting standards of excellence in public administration, education, and training in the context of imperfect governments.

The Committee of Experts on Public Administration (CEPA) is aware of the danger of standardization when it comes to promoting innovation and transformation. The 2030 Agenda aims for transformation, and standardization can hinder innovation. As such, there is a need to strike a balance between standardization and flexibility. To this end, the Committee of Experts crafted a set of principles that were then analyzed, discussed, and propagated in workshops conducted in various countries. The process was ultimately successful due to the champions who drove the process and hosted the workshops. They are the ones who are responsible for the success of this process.

Especially in Africa, Central and Eastern Europe and Latin America, the collaboration between IASIA and ICAPA was very beneficial. It resulted in the development of quality training and research in Central Eastern European countries and excellence in teaching public administration around the world. It would be essential to focus on the utilization of the standards, not just on the revision of existing standards, in order for the standards to be as effective as possible. Close collaboration between relevant associations should also be promoted to utilize these standards better.

The initiative will build on this first experience and its undisputable achievements to meet the requirements and challenges of the context in which we are currently in as schools and institutes for administration, particularly the global agenda for sustainable development, the principles of effective governance, the impact of the pandemic of the COVID-19, the Digital Transformation, and the challenge and issues that the schools and institute for administration are facing today, and, above all, to make sure that our services are meeting citizens and stakeholders' priorities, and needs.

The ever important and essential role of government in establishing boundaries and setting the rules of society call upon public administration professionals in the field to provide guidance to schools, programs, and individuals working or teaching in public administration. The revision of the standards of excellence is especially valuable in terms of providing aspirational goals and standards for programs in the fields throughout the world, and particularly programs that are in countries where the quality of governance is not as strong as it might be in other places. Governments have shown themselves, historically, to be the societal drivers of much of the economic innovation in society. It is the government that facilitates the effectiveness of all other institutions in society.

Governance at all levels must be fit for the conditions and challenges of our times and our future. Institutions have to be able to address shortfalls in SDG achievement, to deal with uncertainties and rapid change including new technologies, to build more resilient societies, and to address inequalities and vulnerabilities. In this period of doubt, uncertainties, and division, governance also has the imperative of generating trust and strengthening social contracts. Governments, citizens, civil society, and other actors joined forces to design and implement effective and innovative practices to enhance governance during the pandemic and these need to inform changes going forward.

Thus, in working on the standards of excellence for education and training, the initiative is seen as an opportunity to work on issues and topics that will profoundly affect the world. The revision and upgrade of the standards of excellence represents a real opportunity to profoundly affect the world for good.

The importance of competencies and of changing mindsets to achieve the SDGs was also recognized as a relevant aspect to take into account when reviewing and updating the SoE. In that sense, understanding and supporting competencies frameworks for SDGs implementation is an essential task for schools and institutes of administration. SDG 16 calls for strong institutions and mindsets that promote effectiveness, inclusiveness, and accountability. The global education community was reassured with the SDG 4, which calls for the international community to ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all. There are competencies that must be taught and promoted to achieve the SDGs. But, values, beliefs, attitudes, behaviors, are issues that have not been given, perhaps, the proper relevance in the curricula of schools of public administration. The quality of public administration training for the achievement of the SDGs will greatly depend on whether training on mindsets, and especially an innovative mindset is pursued. The implementation of the 2030 Agenda is not about incremental improvements, it is about transformational change, including of the public sector. The UN DESA publication on changing mindsets contains a competency framework for the SDGs.

Revising the SoE will allow for the introduction of topics and concerns that were not present when the initial effort was completed 15 years ago, including the Agenda 2030, the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the Principles of Effective Governance, and the Curriculum on Governance for the SDGs.

2.2. Aligning the Standards of Excellence to the principles of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and Goal 16

The Standards were issued several years before the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was adopted by 193 United Nations Member States. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development recognizes the importance of ensuring inclusive and equitable quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all (Goal 4) and the need to build peaceful, just and inclusive societies that provide equal access to justice and that are based on respect for human rights (including the right to development), on effective rule of law and good governance at all levels. Goal 16 of the 2030 Agenda specifically calls for effective, accountable, and inclusive institutions at all levels. Indeed, public institutions play a critical role in the achievement of all the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and targets.

To make institutions effective, accountable, and inclusive, as elaborated in SDG 16, public administration systems must define new or updated standards of excellence for public administration education and training that can advance the principles of the 2030 Agenda across public service and ensure that they are put into practice. The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development recognizes the need to build peaceful, just, and inclusive societies that are based on respect for human rights, effective rule of law and good governance at all levels.

The SDGs are a blueprint to achieve a better and more sustainable future for all. They address the most pressing global challenges, including poverty, inequality, climate change, environmental degradation, peace and justice. Institutions play a critical role in the achievement of all the SDGs and their targets. SDG 16 is not just a stand-alone goal but crucial for achieving the entire 2030 Agenda, its 17 SDGs and key principles such as leaving no one behind. The SDGs are also supported and sustained by other global agendas, namely the Climate change agenda, the New Urban agenda and the Sendai framework for disaster risk reduction.

The guiding principles of the 2030 Agenda are as follows:

- People: End poverty and hunger, in all their forms and dimensions.
- Planet: Protect the planet from degradation, including through sustainable consumption and production, sustainably managing natural resources and taking urgent action on climate change.
- Prosperity: Ensure that all human beings can enjoy prosperous and fulfilling lives.
- Peace: Foster peaceful, just and inclusive societies which are free from fear and violence. There can be no sustainable development without peace and no peace without sustainable development.
- Partnership: Mobilize the means required to implement this Agenda through a revitalised Global Partnership for Sustainable Development.

Goal 16 of the 2030 Agenda plays a critical role as an enabler of change for all other goals. The following targets of Goal 16 are critical to public sector transformation:

- 16.6: Develop effective, accountable and transparent institutions at all levels
- 16.7: Ensure responsive, inclusive, participatory and representative decision-making at all levels
- 16.8: Broaden and strengthen the participation of developing countries in the institutions of global governance
- 16.10: Ensure public access to information and protect fundamental freedoms, in accordance with national legislation and international agreements

“Our Common Agenda”, which contains 12 commitments, was issued in 2021 by the UN Secretary-General, Antonio Guterres. It places emphasis on the importance of improving people’s experiences with public institutions and basic services as part of building trust in government. Putting people first in the digital world is also of paramount importance.

2.3. Reflecting the 11 principles of effective governance for sustainable development in the Standards of Excellence

The Standards of Excellence must also reflect the 11 principles of effective governance for sustainable development, which were developed by the Committee of Experts on Public Administration (CEPA) and endorsed by the Economic and Social Council on 2 July 2018. The essential elements of effectiveness, accountability and inclusiveness of SDG 16 are also at the core of the Principles of Effective Governance for Sustainable Development. The principles provide a baseline for future policy and practice and encourage the study of more specific issues in public administration. Every principle is associated with a subset of indicators derived from the SDGs as well as a number of commonly used strategies, 62 in total. They can provide practical, expert guidance in a broad range of governance challenges associated with the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

The 11 principles of effective governance for sustainable development aim to provide practical, expert guidance to interested countries on a broad range of governance challenges associated with the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. They highlight the need for pragmatic and ongoing improvements in national and local governance capabilities to reach the SDGs. The principles are linked to 62 commonly used strategies for operationalizing responsive and effective governance, many of which have been recognized and endorsed over the years in various UN forums, resolutions and treaties.

How can the principles be operationalized?

The CEPA has developed a wide range of commonly used strategies for operationalization of the 11 principles. DESA/DPIDG has been working with global experts to prepare guidance notes and provide content to the strategies to support full implementation of the principles and the 2030 Agenda. The notes include information on how a government can both assess its current status and measure progress in applying the strategy to national policymaking processes and implement the 2030 Agenda. All the notes have recent case studies and good practices to advance the principles with practical and illustrative guides.

One of the principles of effective governance is competence. A competent and effective public service with well-motivated and professional public servants is at the center of success in implementing government policies and programs related to the 2030 Agenda and the SDGs, including in delivering services to those left furthest behind. Without a dedicated effort to help governments mobilize and develop the knowledge and capacities of public servants at all levels, progress on the SDGs may be undermined. The use of digital technologies in education and training, which was accelerated by the Covid-19 pandemic, also needs to be reflected, and considered, by the Standards of excellence.

The development of human resources, as recalled by Resolution A/RES/72/235 adopted (without a vote) by the General Assembly of the United Nations, on December 20, 2017, reaffirmed by the Resolution A/77/447/Add.4, par. 8 adopted on 14 December 2022, is not only the keystone of economic, social, and environmental development, and health and education are at the heart of this process, but such a development of human resources is also an essential element of the action taken to achieve the agreed development goals at the international level, including the Sustainable Development Goals, and to provide more opportunities, especially for the most vulnerable groups. More information on the principles of effective governance and the CEPA Strategy Guidance Notes can be found here.

2.4. Raising awareness of the Curriculum on Governance for the SDGs across schools of public administration

Working closely with schools of public administration, institutes of public management and universities, who are responsible for training public servants, is critical to mainstreaming the SDGs into their curricula. To this end, UN DESA/DPIDG launched in 2018 a Global Initiative on Building Capacities of Public Servants for the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) Implementation, which aims at developing the capacities of governments and public servants (in terms of knowledge, skills, attitude, leadership competencies, and mindsets) to support the implementation of the SDGs. DPIDG also published the first publication ever issued on how to change mindsets in public institutions to realize the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

In 2021, UN DESA/DPIDG further developed, together with over 50 partners, including schools of public administration and experts, a Curriculum on Governance for Sustainable Development. The Curriculum Training of Trainers Toolkits, which address the 11 Principles of Effective Governance, offer a holistic and integrated framework for capacity development in the area of governance and public institutions. The Curriculum aims to promote the critical understanding of sustainable development issues, enhance governance capacity, and strengthen public servants' awareness of their active role in contributing to the achievement of the SDGs.

The Curriculum on Governance is a comprehensive set of Training of Trainers Capacity Development Toolkits, which contain ready-to-use and customizable training material on key governance dimensions needed to advance the implementation of the SDGs. It provides methodologies and approaches to advance knowledge and assists governments in developing capacities at the individual, organizational, and institutional/societal levels, to drive the transformational change needed to implement the 2030 Agenda. The review of the Standards of excellence, working closely with IASIA, is an opportunity to raise awareness of the above issues.

The Curriculum is composed of the following:

- A set of Training of Trainers Capacity Development Toolkits for 5-day face to face capacity development workshops. The trainings can be longer or shorter in duration, depending on countries' needs;
- Online Courses on key governance issues to implement the SDGs;
- Facilitated Online Training and Capacity Development Workshops;
- Customized Online and Offline Capacity Development Workshops upon request of Member States;
- Offering a Certificate of Attendance upon successful completion;
- Global Community of Practice on key governance issues;
- Hosted on UNPAN for networking and online exchange of knowledge.

By facilitating training of trainers, the Curriculum can help equip public servants with the knowledge and capacities to implement the SDGs effectively. The Curriculum's training material can be used to run face-to-face and online training workshops at national and local government levels. The toolkits are inter-related, and modules from one toolkit can be used in combination with modules from other toolkits to suit specific countries' needs. More than 48 partnerships were established for internal and external review of the toolkits and over 1,000 participants took part in the online training workshop to pilot the toolkits with 94% of positive feedback. The learning outcomes of the training toolkits are usually designed around the often-expressed challenges of strengthening national to local government coordination and institutional effectiveness for the SDGs.

The Curriculum Toolkits address the Eleven Principles of Effective Governance. The Curriculum on Governance for the Sustainable Development Goals aims to provide a holistic and integrated framework for capacity development in the area of governance and public institutions. It aims to promote critical understanding of sustainable development issues, enhance governance capacity, and strengthen public servants' awareness of their active role in contributing to the achievement of the SDGs.

5.2. What is the Methodology for the Review of the Standards of Excellence?

The approved methodology for the review of the Standards of Excellence is as follows:

- Confirm and approve a standard with no changes;
- Review a standard/s and update its description and indicators;
- Change a standard/s, its description and indicators;
- Abolish a standard/s;
- Create a new standard/s with its description and indicators.

In reviewing and updating the SoE (or when creating new ones), members of the Taskforce should take into consideration the evaluation criteria to be applied/used by accrediting institutions or make proposals in that regard.

Task Force members who would like to contribute to the SoE final publication with a chapter about the process or the importance of reviewing/updating or establishing a new Standard are welcome to do so in coordination with UN DESA / IASIA.

It was agreed that each Taskforce member will take advantage of events/conferences/seminars and all other academic activities to invite other stakeholders to participate in the SoE review process.

In terms of communications, it was also agreed that social media should be used as much as possible to disseminate the initiative.

Annex VI: Activities (2005-2008)

A number of activities were undertaken over the course of 4 years (2005-2008) as part of the initiative as follows:

- Expert Group Meetings and conferences were held in Turin, Italy; Bratislava, Slovakia; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; and New York City. The meetings focused on the development of a strategy for the improvement of public administration education and training. Overall, 1,500 people attended these and other meetings related to the standards of excellence. At the Expert Group Meeting on “New Challenges for Senior Leadership Enhancement for Improved public Management in a Globalizing World”, which took place in Turin, Italy, the participants made efforts to define governmental leadership, to categorize the UN/IAISIA initiative in terms of target groups and to review key issues facing governmental leadership. The seminar on “Improving the Quality of Public Administration Education and Training: New Needs, New Approaches”, co-sponsored by IAISIA, the Brazilian School of Public Administration, Fundação Getulio Vargas, and UN/DESA/ DPADM and held in Rio de Janeiro, resulted in the development of a set of ideas and techniques that are appropriate for the education and training for the next generation of governmental leadership. It focused on both education and training activities and, most importantly, on the ways to make them relevant to newly developing civil servants.
- At the direction of the Task Force, the UN commissioned a variety of papers designed to provide relevant background information and research and preparation of the volume
- The papers were used for a publication on leadership capacity enhancement in a globalizing world entitled: “Excellence and Leadership in the Public Sector: The Role of Education and Training”.

- A survey of public administration education and training institutions in transitional countries was developed. It was carried out by one of Africa's most prominent public administration scholars, Jide Balogun.
- A final Report of the standards of excellence and the criteria for assessing the standards was finalized and published in 2008. "In its introduction to the Standards, the Task Force noted its belief that the purpose of public administration education and training is to provide public administrators with the competencies and capacities to contribute to the improvement of the quality of life and the building of a better world, especially for the most economically, socially and politically disadvantaged members of society".
- The Report containing the recommended standards of excellence was presented and adopted by its members during the annual IASIA conference in Uganda in 2008.
- Publication of the United Nations, In Quest of Excellence, Approaches to Enhancing the Quality of Public Administration Education and Training, IASIA/IIAS, 2015.
